

About Student Response Systems

Using a student response system can significantly change the way students and educators interact. This educational tool enables instructors to assess student knowledge, provide continuous, immediate, feedback and encourage all students to participate. A student response system can also be used in training and conference settings, as well as department and staff meetings.

Connecting Every Student

At i>clicker, we've worked hard to create a remote that is accessible for every student. From the initial design of the large-buttoned remote to our vibrating clickers and Braille stickers, i>clicker is committed to making student response hardware accessible. i>